New League Formed When Majors Broke Up

Chicago, Nov. 8.—The major baseball leagues today were broken up and a new twelve club league composed of the eight National league clubs and the three from the American league which have sided with them in the plans for reorganization of the game was organized. A twelfth member will be chosen later, it was announced.

Organization of the new league came after the five American league clubs had refused to reply to an ultimatum issued by the other eleven clubs, giving them an hour and a half to join in the reorganization.

After organizing the new league the magnates proceeded with the Lasker plan for civilian control of professional baseball and appointed Judge Kenesaw M. Landis of Chicago chairman of the tribunal which will govern the game.

Judge Landis, if he accepts the position, will be the supreme dictator of all leagues joining the plan and will receive a salary of $50,000 a year.

Second and third members of the tribunal will be appointed later and one of them will be chosen by the minor leagues. Representatives of the new league left tonight for Kansas, where the National Association of Minor leagues meets tomorrow to present the proposition to them.

The minor league member would serve for six years while Judge Landis would be given a contract for seven years, according to a statement made after the meeting by the club owners.

Judge Landis was notified of his appointment by a committee of five members and he told them he would accept the position under advisement for a few days.

The plans for the new league and a new controlling body contain frequent reference to the minor leagues, which are given assurance that they will not be overlooked in administration of the game and that their territory will not be invaded in selecting the twelfth member of the new league.

The action came after an all-day session of both factions in the reorganization plans with neither side yielding to the other.

Embassies from the Johnson camp conferred with the club owners at the joint session of eight National and three American league clubs but without result. At 2:30 p. m., the joint session issued an ultimatum to the Johnson clubs telling them that they could either come over and take part in the meeting, which would be governed by a majority vote, or the league would be formed. Failing to hear from the five American league clubs, the other eleven clubs went ahead with their announcement plans.

The five clubs which stood with Johnson in the fight are Detroit, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Washington and St. Louis. Tonight they maintained that the new league would have no effect on them.

"We are the majority of the American league and consequently are the American league," Clark Griffith of the Washington club said.

"The American league will operate this year with or without the Chicago New York and Boston clubs."

The new league will give New York, Chicago and Boston two clubs in the same league. Brooklyn also is included, giving greater New York three representatives. The other members were Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, St. Louis (National), Philadelphia (National), and the twelfth member yet to be chosen.

Previous to today's action, members of Johnson's "solid five" had declared that the three American league clubs would not be able to take their place in the new league, maintaining that the players on a club belonged to the league under contracts previously made. This factor, they said, would give the five remaining American league clubs additional strength and enable them to proceed with organization of a new American league.

Individual club owners said they would "fight to the last court" before allowing any player to be taken over by the new league.

The rules governing the leagues which enter into the new arrangement will be drafted later with the tribunal has been selected. The minor leagues will be represented in the drafting of the regulations.

The new regulations will be known as the "New National League" and John Heydler, president of the now defunct National League, will be president and treasurer.

In deciding all matters, the votes under the new plan will be cast by clubs and not by leagues.

The new National league had its inception in the 1919 world's series scandal. After eight members of the White Sox team had been indicted for alleged participation in the throwing of a game, a letter was sent to all club members by William Veeck, president of the Chicago National League club, John McGraw of the New York Giants, Barney Dreyfuss and others telling them that "it was time for a new deal in baseball with a new governing institution."

This letter outlined the plan proposed by A. D. Lasker of the Chicago National League club, which called for a civilian tribunal. Later, at a meeting of the eight National league clubs and the three American league clubs siding with them, the plan was approved and the other five American league clubs notified that they could come in or the eleven clubs would form a new twelve club league.

Meetings were called for today by both factions, the clubs backing Johnson, previously having countered with a proposition that each league appoint a committee of three to confer with a like committee from the minor leagues.

The eleven clubs refused to change from the original stand and when their final ultimatum, issued at 3 p. m. today, was not answered, went ahead with their plan.

Lack of a chairman for the national commission for many months, the baseball scandal and the enmity of the three American league clubs for San Johnson were contributory causes to the formation of the league. The clubs joining in the plan have opposed Johnson in league affairs for years and nearly disrupted the league last year. They charged Johnson with being the "car of baseball" while the clubs friendly to the American league president countered with charges that the proposed reorganization was merely a plan to depose Johnson.

The following statement was issued by the eleven club owners forming the new league:

"To the American public: The eleven clubs which were signatory to the resolutions adopted at a meeting in Chicago on October 18 last, according to the call of the resolutions this morning, Mr. Clark Griffith and subsequently, Attorney George W. Miller, representing the directors of the American league, and the eleven dissenting American league clubs, would not attend a joint session of club owners allowing any player to be taken over by the new league."

"They proposed that the five dissenting clubs appoint a committee of three to meet with a like committee to represent the National League for the purpose of subsequently meeting a committee of three from the minor leagues to draft a plan for the reorganization of baseball."

"These eleven signatory owners stood on the fundamental principle that under the old system of interleague affairs, controlled by league votes, selfishness and politics had crept into the game resulting in scandals on the playing field and that in all matters that were strictly baseball could be fully controlled by the players and their representatives individually so that their responsibilities to their constituents and their local public could be marked."

"For several hours the eleven club owners pleaded with Messrs. Griffith and Miller to bring the other four members of the league into the meeting. It was made plain that the whole object of the joint meeting of owners was that baseball be reconstructed on such a high plane as to merit public confidence and that a control of baseball be reconstructed on such a high plane as to merit public confidence and that a control of baseball be reconstructed on such a high plane as to merit public confidence."

"It was emphasized that each club would have one vote and that the suggestions of each club would be fully considered. It was felt by the eleven owners that so long as the leagues voted as leagues, the selfish interests of each league would be paramount in interleague affairs and that it was only by unselfishness in interleague affairs, with no advantage to any league or club, that the control of baseball could be put on an altruistic and impartial basis."

"The five dissenting clubs were given until four o'clock to appear in the meeting, but failing to do so, the eleven signatories proceeded with the formation of a twelve club league, as provided by the resolutions of October 18. This league will be known as the New National League and John A. Heydler will continue as president, secretary and treasurer."

The teams comprising the league are the Boston Braves, the Boston Red Sox, Brooklyn, Chicago, Cincinnati, Chicago White Sox, New York Giants, New York Yankees, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis.

The clubs agreed that the twelfth club should be the first of the five dissenting American league clubs who would apply for membership. Failing to receive such application within a reasonable time, the twelfth club is to be established by the new National League and it is not the intention that minor league territory be invaded.

"The meeting then proceeded to reaffirm its acceptance of the Lasker plan of baseball reorganization, which, with slight modifications, was formally adopted, the chief modifications being that the minor leagues should be requested and permitted to choose an associate member of the board of control."

"Honorable Keneas Mountain Landis, judge of the district court of the United States for Chicago, was unanimously tendered the position of chairman of the board of control for a term of seven years at an annual salary of $50,000. A committee of seven members, to be appointed by the board of control, was named to select the twelfth club. The committee was composed of Messrs. Griffith, Miller, Heydler, and the four other members of the board of control."

"The Lasker plan provides for the appointment of two associate members of the board of control, neither of which was elected. A committee from the minor leagues has gone to Kansas City to tender the minors an opportunity to elect a candidate of their own choice to associate members for the six year term."

The third member, whose term will be five years, was not chosen pending Judge Landis' acceptance of the chairmanship of the board of control.

TIGERS LOSE AGAIN TO N. L. INDEPENDENTS

The Tigers of Greenville met defeat again Sunday at the hands of the New London Independents at Woodland Grove, New London, by the score of 13 to 0. The defeat hardly tells of the wonderful fight the home boys gave the much heavier New London team.

It seemed as though the Tigers could gain at will through their opponent's line in spite of their advantage of weight but at the crucial time beef held back the gamblers.

Twice New London was threatened at their five yard line but the superior weight of each club would be fully considered. It was felt by the eleven owners that so long as the leagues voted as leagues, the selfish interests of each league would be paramount in interleague affairs and that it was only by unselfishness in interleague affairs, with no advantage to any league or club, that the control of baseball could be put on an altruistic and impartial basis."
